A YARN ABOUT YARN.

It is very, very surprising, yet a well know phenomon, that every-thing is held together by a thread.

Even a good picture, such as this, must have a "thread" of a story running right through it. And even if the thread happens to be yarn, then perhaps it will knit together better.

Farmer Al had turned to going his own knittin'., and had asked Bozo Dog, and Hemoplezgia Cat to assist him with the yarn. They get along swimmingly, until Bozo knocks the ball of yarn away from Hemoplezgia. There always seemed to be a bunch of fat headed mice hanging around Al's joint, and for lack of something to do, they jumped right onto the ball of yarn and carried it away. Al tries to get it, and the darn fool mouse bites his finger. Then Al bawls out poor little Hemoplezgia and makes her cry.

Then right after that the rest of the scallywags steal a whole basket full of yarn. First they tie up the Farmer, spilling him right on his nose, then they tangle up "Hem" the old dear, and roll her right into a big ball of yarn. "Hem" is rolled violently against a tree and knocked cockoo. "Hem" picks herself up and starts to slaughter all the mice.

By' M'By, a gang of mice get together and rope the energetic old Farmer, dragging him across country. Finnacle they tie him and his precious "Hem" old dear, up in a Hickory tree and leave them fighting, while all the mice do an Indian dance.

Aesop Says:

"Some people are so hard you wonder if they were born or quarried."
